ACCIDENTAL DEATHS.

Mr. McKeon has a splendid breech-loading, two-barrelied shot gun of Osborne's make, worth one hundred and fifty dollars, which will be voted to the most popular sportsman. Tom Occke has put up the immense and magnificent meershaum which he won recently at the Peabody when the chances were five dollars each. This smoking apparatus has an amber mouthpiece, the value of which would be a small fortune for an ordinary person. There is no such pipe in Memphis, and it is doubtful if ever the Grand Turk whifted Virginia "fine-cut" from a better. It is worth three hundred dollars. The chances are only one dollar each.

But severe though truthful larguage like this is not necessary to stir up the good people of Memphis to their duty to the orphans. Every one who feels that he, or she, ought to do a deed who feels that he, or she, ought to those Hereafter every member who falls to attend the funeral of a deceased member of the society will be required to pay a fine of five dollars. It should not be forgotten that the Oid Folks is now an incorporated body, and that its decrees are final, and that any justice or court will enter up judgments on these by-laws against the members. Fines imposed by the venerable president are also collectable, and it is the private opinion of some people that the ancient J. H. had better whole assembly to Jake's, at Jack's cost.
